

Lily Smokler and Jiaxin Zhang (CC)

Star Face

concept proposal

Inner Rock Star Station

The Inner Rock Star Station appears outside of schools, professional events, social venues, festivals, and more, providing a confidence boost before high-pressure moments such as presentations, interviews, first dates, etc. Bold and colorful, it transforms acne and stress into a playful, empowering accessory, helping everyone tackle life's big moments with confidence and style. The pop-up lets attendees choose from a variety of Starface patches that resonate with them while being surrounded by motivational quotes and comforting elements. This helps calming nerves, preparing them for the moment, and bringing out their inner rock star.

concept 1

Starface Signs

The Zodiac Fortune Machine is a playful, guerilla-style installation that pops up in malls, schools, plazas, and beyond. The machine 'reads your sign' like a horoscope and dispenses a free color-matched Starface patch to fit your vibe, transforming acne care into a social cosmic and shareable experience. This activation is designed to create buzz across social media and inspire others to join in, driving both awareness and sales. Over time, the experience can expand digitally, letting users discover their custom Starface Sign and order their personalized patches directly from the website, complete with a special discount code.

concept 2

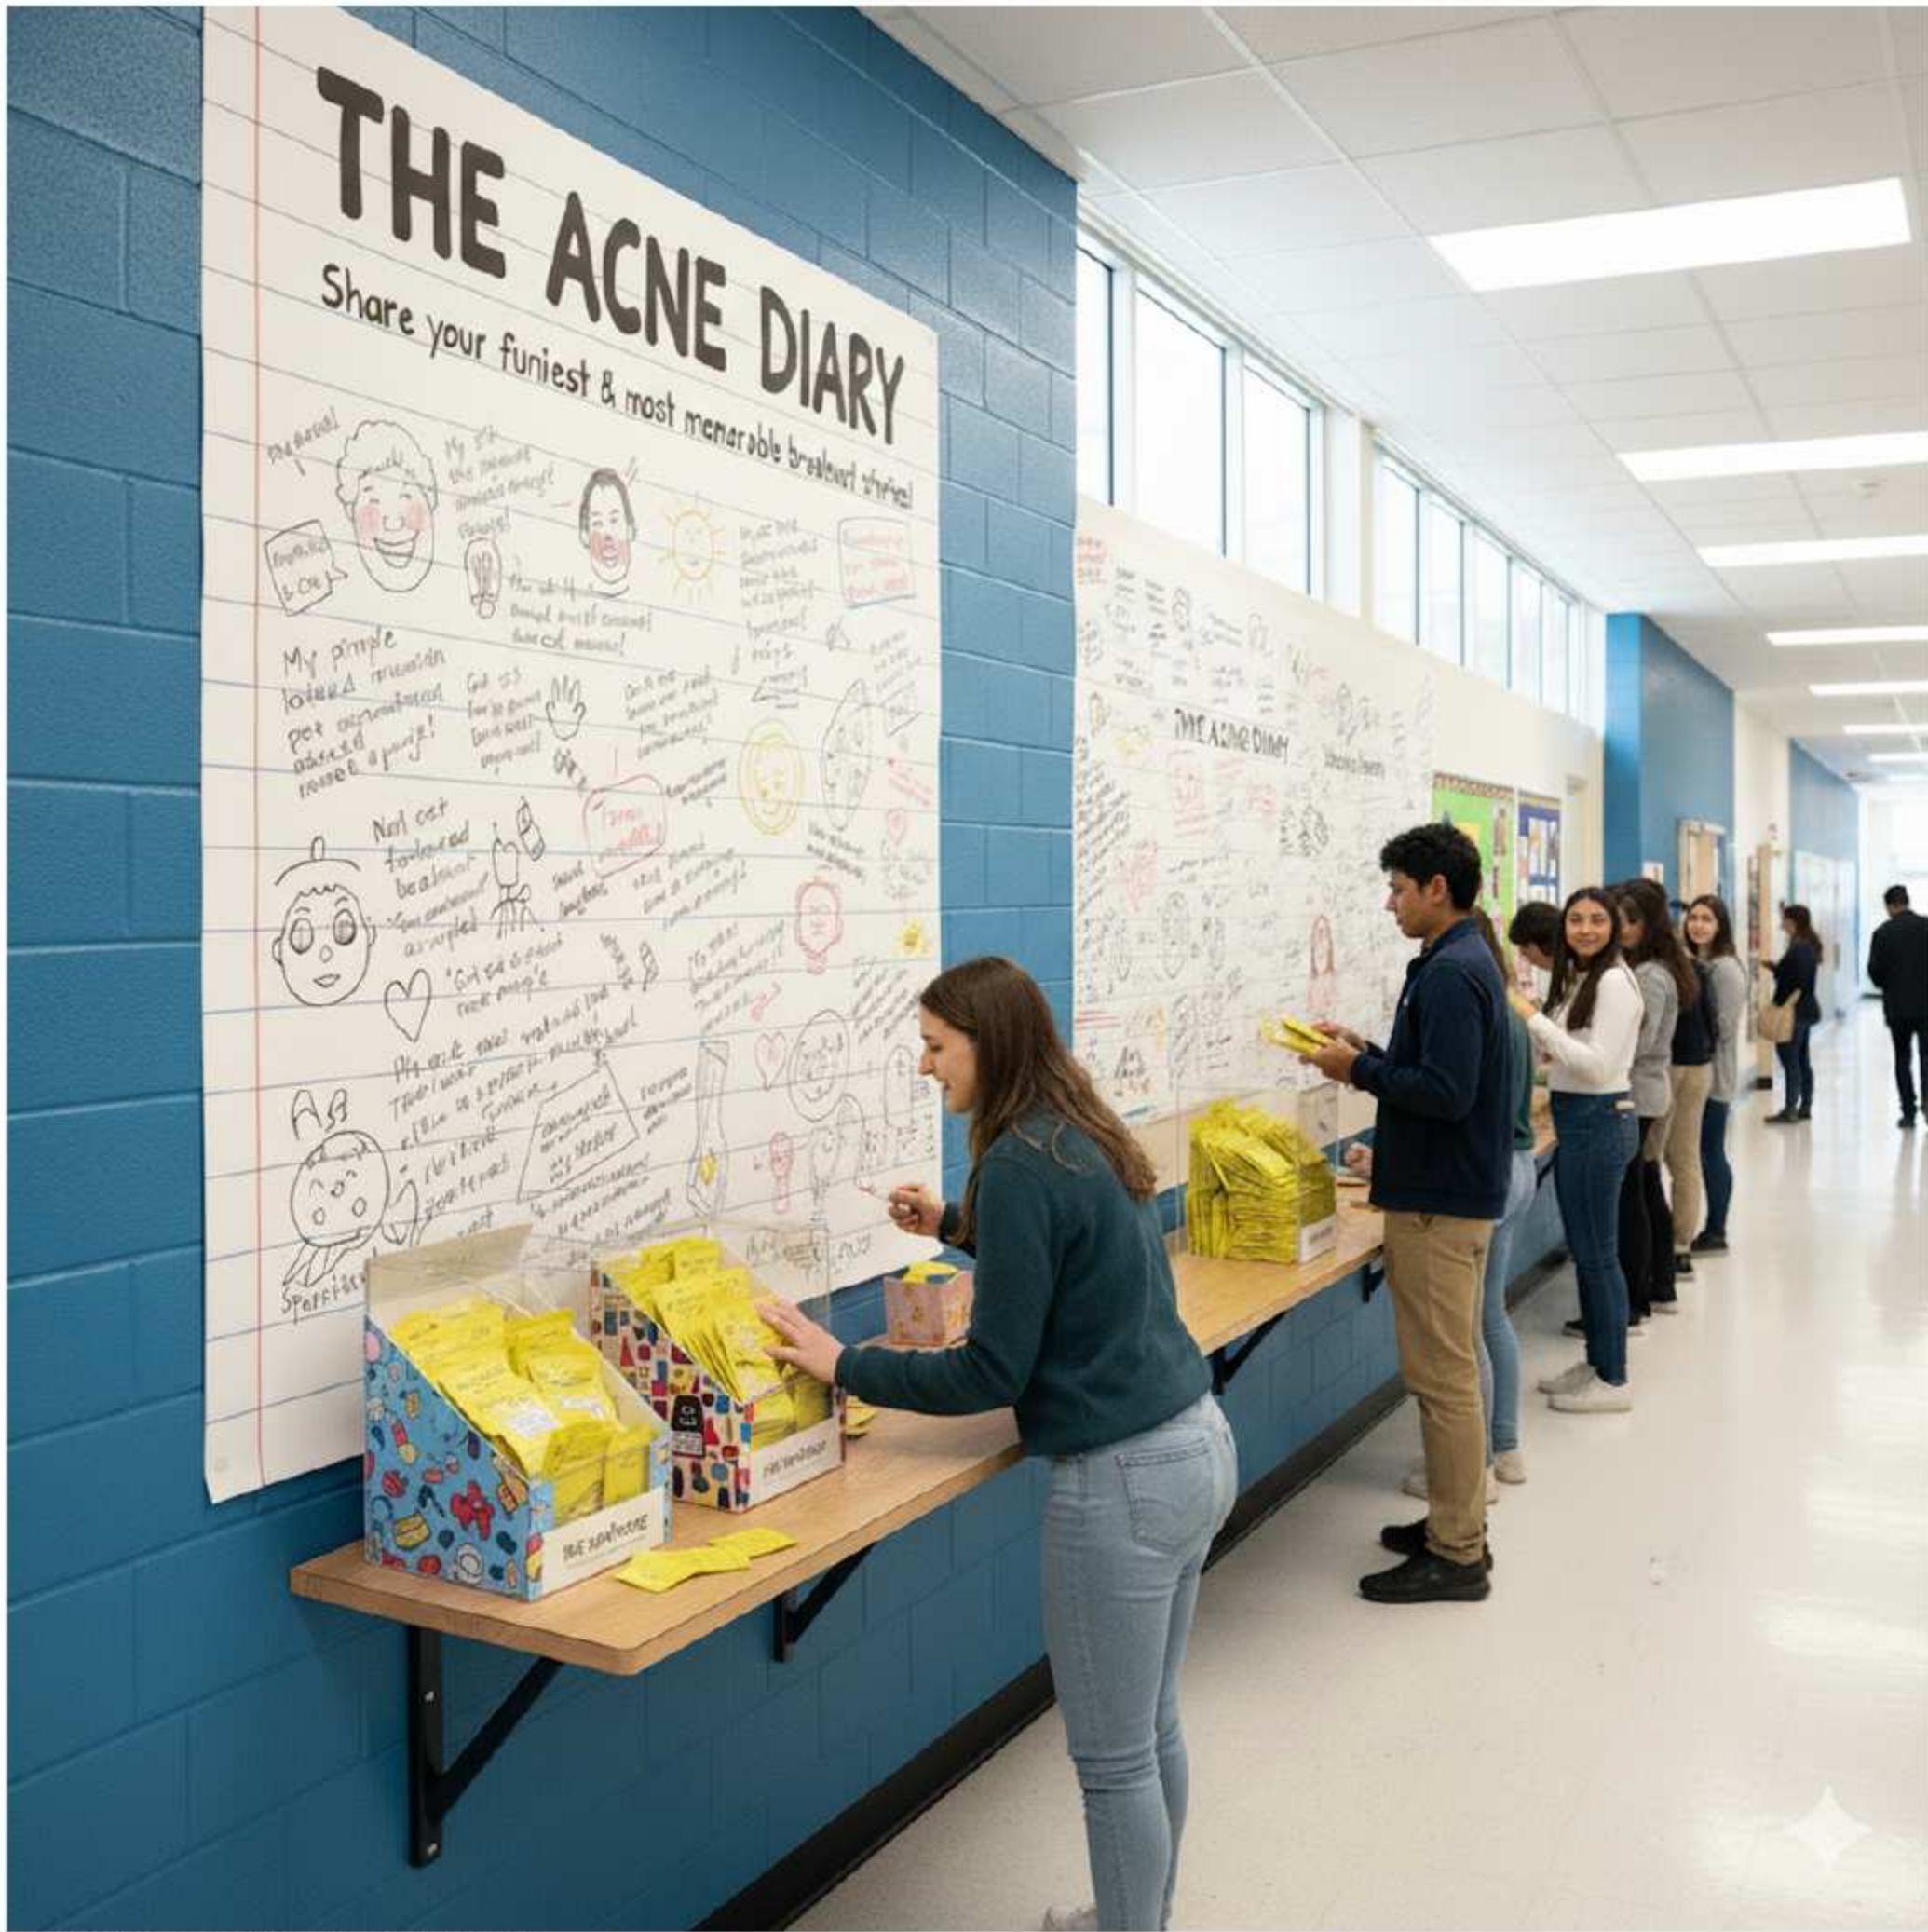

The Acne Diary

The Acne Diary is a bold installation that flips the script on acne by turning it into something to laugh about and share. Designed like an oversized sheet of notebook paper, the wall invites students to write or doodle their funniest and or most memorable breakout stories. In return, they receive free Starface patches, transforming awkward experiences into playful ones. As the wall fills up, it becomes a collective diary of acne moments, sparking conversations. The Acne Diary can transform into a social media trend that fosters confidence, community, and cultural buzz around Starface.

concept 3

Thank you!